

A.L.I.C.E. TRAINING

Kent State University's Department of Public Safety, in partnership with the division of Human Resources, are conducting ALICE workshops. The 90-minute long A.L.I.C.E. sessions are designed to give participants insight and response options when confronting an active shooter. A.L.I.C.E. -- Alert, Lockdown, Information, Counter, and Evacuation -- is crisis training created by two Texas law enforcement officers.

This highly effective and "common sense" training has been readily adopted by many educational law enforcement institutions in Ohio and throughout the United States. The training is open to everyone but we are encouraging faculty and staff to take the time to attend one of the sessions. Hopefully you will never have to use the information you will learn, but if a situation does arise in a classroom or office, you will have an idea of what you can do to increase your survivability.

TO REGISTER FOR THIS WORKSHOP:

Faculty and Staff: Register on the KSU Human Resources website, www.kent.edu/hr/register and search for "A.L.I.C.E. Training" (Be sure to include the periods after each letter.)

Students: Register on the Office of Student Success website, www.kent.edu/success and follow the Quick Link to Student Success Programs. The ALICE training is listed under the Success Series Presentations.

A.L.I.C.E. TRAINING

Kent State University's Department of Public Safety, in partnership with the division of Human Resources, are conducting ALICE workshops. The 90-minute long A.L.I.C.E. sessions are designed to give participants insight and response options when confronting an active shooter. A.L.I.C.E. -- Alert, Lockdown, Information, Counter, and Evacuation -- is crisis training created by two Texas law enforcement officers.

This highly effective and "common sense" training has been readily adopted by many educational law enforcement institutions in Ohio and throughout the United States. The training is open to everyone but we are encouraging faculty and staff to take the time to attend one of the sessions. Hopefully you will never have to use the information you will learn, but if a situation does arise in a classroom or office, you will have an idea of what you can do to increase your survivability.

TO REGISTER FOR THIS WORKSHOP:

Faculty and Staff: Register on the KSU Human Resources website, www.kent.edu/hr/register and search for "A.L.I.C.E. Training" (Be sure to include the periods after each letter.)

Students: Register on the Office of Student Success website, www.kent.edu/success and follow the Quick Link to Student Success Programs. The ALICE training is listed under the Success Series Presentations.

